the face of the present terrific danger, Mr. Dillon continued, the Government would be encouraged to pursue their wicked and insane policy and the discipline of the people, which 's essential to the defeat of conscription, would be broken. Then the whole game would be thrown into the hands of the military authorities.

The Nationalists and Sinn Feiners, he said, actually agreed that the whole struggle for Ireland's rights was based on the principle of her rights as a nation. There was an impression in the country that all danger was over. This was a terribly false imprression, Mr. Dillon declared. There was no question that the Government had been staggered and no longer were so confident about the practicability of their policy as professed when the bill was introduced. He suggested the formation of Irish committees attached to every church and chapel, so that, in the event of a struggle being forced upon them, the church could be the rallying point.

The Nationalist leader declared he was convinced that it would take an army such as England could ill spare to carry out successfully conscription in Ireland. He was also convinced that the Government would split on the Irish rock and, instead of destroying the Irish nation, the Irish would destroy them.

Prof. de Valera said his would unite with those of Mr. Dillon. to defeat conscription. With the reference to the issue raised in East Cavan he said there was only one arbitrator to whom the Sinn Fein would submit, namely, the free choice of the electors.

DUBLIN, May 6.—Declaring that be Government's conscription-Home the Government's conscription-Home Rule policy is disastrous, Sir Horace Plunkett, Chairman of the recent Irish Plunkett, Chairman of the recent read convention, in a letter to the press suggests the immediate establishment of a responsible government in Ireland as a way out of the difficulty.

"At the gravest crisis with which the empire has ever been faced," says the letter," the Government had staked their existence on a two-fold Irish pol-icy—conscription and home rule. They cannot achieve both except at the cost of much bloodshed and lasting hate. They might achieve the first and by it make the second impossible. In my opinion they would fall in the attempt and have to go on leaving both un-

Asserting his opinion that it is possible even now to achieve the double purpose. Sir Horace says further:

"There is only one alternative to the disastrous policy upon which the Government has embarked—namely, to set up immediately a responsible Government in Ireland. The report of the convention has shown this could be done with the support of a largebody of Nationalists and Uninist opinion. They should pass through Parliament without delay the necessary legislation as a war measure. The present chaes, with its growing bitterness, its utter demoralization of our public life and its discredit to British statesmanship, need not be continued while we are waiting for a Parliament. Asserting his opinion that it is pos continued while we are waiting for a parliament.

"The moment the bill is passed an Irish executive, broadly representative and composed of responsible men who would not shirk the burden of their brief authority, should be appointed and given the task of setting up a Parliament as quickly as possible, promoting voluntarily recruiting and generally carrying on.

"The Irish people, given their own instrument of Government, would quickly show the world their real attitude in this war."
